

God, Has Given Me A Well Taught
Tongue

<Isaiah

50:4>

Words! Words! Words!

Your words are like nitroglycerine they can either blow up bridges or heal hearts. You can tell more about somebody by what they say about others, than by what others say about them. Never judge a person's horsepower by their exhaust; know that ignorance is always quick to speak. Wisdom teaches that the best time to hold your tongue is when you feel like you "just have to say something."

Some people speak from experience, others from experience do not speak. That is because they have learned better. Jesus said that your words actually determine your destiny. Listen..."Your words now reflect your fate then: either you will be justified by them or you will be condemned" <Matthew 12:37>. Solomon said, "Words kill, words give life, they are either poison or fruit...you choose" <Proverbs 18:21>.

Try to remember that your words have the capacity for good or evil, they either hurt or heal. If there is one place where we all need more discipline, it is in the "word department."

Isaiah said, "God has given me a well taught tongue, so I know how to encourage...people.

He wakes me up....opens my ears to listen as one ready to take orders...God, stays right there and helps me.....so I am not disgraced" <Isaiah 50:4-7>.

When you do not know what to say....say nothing! Just listen, observe, and let God lead you. After all, you are usually not learning while you are talking.

Just for today, try to refrain from all hurtful remarks and focus only on speaking words that encourage and bless others.

You will be amazed at the results. Than when you see the results...apply this to your speech in your everyday life. Amen

Be blessed
IN HIS SERVICE....Diane
